

Kneeslider Cookie Notice

Our website like most, is visible to the world, specifically targeted to a small area called the south of England. For now, this little patch of land called Hampshire, falls within the EU (god only knows how long for) and therefore, until our government, whoever it may be this week, pulls their fingers out of their arses, our site needs to be compliant to ensure that we stay on the good side of the people. Because of this we are obliged to inform you of the following:

Kneeslider is not a business. We are a covers band performing music of other artistes material for the listening pleasure of discerning audiences in varying drinking establishments.

We do not collect or store personal data on or from this website, nor do we force advertising of anything but ourselves. However, this website does use cookies to allow us to analyse how many people are visiting the site, what pages they are looking at and how long they stay on each page. This information allows us to continually develop and improve our site.

The only cookies we realistically care about are the ones you can eat, preferably round ones with some sort of chocolate ingredient. For a great recipe, copy the following link to your web browser:

<https://www.bbcgoodfood.com/recipes/2459643/vintage-chocolate-chip-cookies>

By clicking "Enter", you agree to the use of Cookies by this website.

If you do not agree, please leave this page using the nearest convenient exit. If you cannot find one, the easiest way for any technophobe is to utilise the strategically placed 'Back' button on your web browser.

Alternatively, we are obliged to advise you that you can choose to turn the cookies off on your device. Should you wish to execute this action, don't ask us how, we don't have a scooby-do, nor do we earn enough money to employ a dedicated IT Department. What we can do however, is provide you with a link to find out for yourselves:

<https://www.aboutcookies.org.uk/managing-cookies>

Seems a load of unnecessary mumbo jumbo to us, just to find out when and where we are playing, but it is the law!